The State of Canada's Birds

The newly released State of Canada's Birds is a partnership between Birds Canada and Environment and Climate Change Canada. It's built on over 50 years of bird monitoring data, much of it collected by Citizen Scientists. It combines the data with expert analysis to answer one, simple question:

How are Canada's birds doing?

The report provides accessible, scientific insight into the population status of 463 bird species that occur regularly in Canada. The rise and fall of bird populations tells us how they, and by extension their habitats, are doing. Habitat loss threatens birds across Canada and affects migratory birds throughout their annual journeys. The destruction and degradation of habitats is driven by agricultural practices, urban development, natural resource extraction, and infrastructure.

Population change since 1970

The report explicitly reinforces that drinking Smithsonian Bird Friendly coffee is an important action to support populations of long-distance migrants. This is because Bird Friendly coffee cultivation preserves good habitat in the wintering grounds of migratory songbirds.

Canada's birds have stories to tell. Let's hear their stories, allow them move us to action, and retell them to others!

We are ready for a Potential Canada Post Strike

Canada Post has advised us of a potential strike or lockout beginning next week. We have arrangements with other couriers that will ensure that your coffee orders are delivered during any potential labour disruption. There may be a slight delay as the other couriers adjust to increased volumes but we will send you tracking details when we ship, so you can monitor the progress of your package.

Is it time to clean your grinder?

One of the best things home brewers can do to improve the flavour of their coffee is grind their coffee just prior to brewing. Burr grinders are best, but a grinder is better than purchasing pre-ground coffee.

But if you have a burr grinder, it needs to be thoroughly cleaned. Fortunately we have Cafetto Grinder Cleaner that is effective, easy to use and is made without binders or chemicals. It's even gluten free!

Here is a new post about how it removed a taint from my coffee!
