About the Contest

One of the most respected nature photography competitions in the world, the Audubon Photography Awards celebrates the beauty and diversity of birds by honoring the best photos and videos of birdlife. The winning images, chosen from thousands of entries, capture a dazzling array of bird species and behaviors. They also illustrate the essential relationship between birds and the habitats they need to thrive.

This year, the Audubon Photography Awards will offer new sets of prizes for entrants on two continents—spanning, just as birds do, vibrant cultures and vital ecosystems across the Western Hemisphere. Entrants from the United States and Canada, and from Chile and Colombia, will each be eligible for cash prizes and a chance to have their images featured in Audubon magazine.

Explore the information below to learn about the contest for U.S. and Canada residents, including expert judges, rules, and all-new prizes. With the addition of Birds Without Borders and Conservation Prizes, we're showcasing not only how birds connect us, but also how photography inspires action to protect them.
