10 simple and beautiful ways to celebrate Winter Solstice

Winter solstice marks the darkest depths of winter and the beginning of the return of the sun. It is a time to celebrate the light within the darkness. It is a time to look back on the year that has passed and to look to the passing of another season. One of the things I've noticed in abundance this year is the call to slow down after Samhain. To make rest and turn to inward reflection. We are after all, cyclical beings that are part of nature and we can't be constantly in energetic as we are in the Spring and Summer months.

If you want to check out my last post, which was all about Samhain and Winter Solstice journaling, you'll find it here. this is the first year of my celebrating Winter Solstice. And as I've woken in rituals and ways to celebrate the return of the sun, it struck me how many of these have morphed into Christmas celebrations, but their origins can be traced back to Pagan and Celtic traditions. It feels so much more aligned to be honoring ancient traditions that I've always enjoyed each year, but also connecting with the nature aligned purpose of why they're so beautiful to Yanina.

For the last couple of years we've not had a tree. Instead I've bought off cuts of fir branches and decorated our fireplace instead. It's been the year of simplicity. I've always been a fan of winter for so, especially this year lockdown. We would go into the garden on cold clear nights, get the fire on to stargaze and marvel at the interstellar of the universe.

Light always leads for me. We have simple stars in our windows, inspired by our travels in Norway, where the glow would guide and welcome to locals and travellers home on the snowy winter nights and to welcome in light and warmth at the darkest depths of winter.

I am looking forward to getting up to watch sunrise out of the sea, knowing it is made from first light scaling the cliffs and hills behind our house. I'm looking forward to the sun setting over the sea and the mountains in the afternoon prepping a feast and the time to be with family. Everything we think about Winter Solstice means so far, I've been working on re-discovering our common nature, painting the walls and Fawn Tiles, to create a space where we can slip away and immerse in rituals in a beautiful nature connected space and I'm so excited to spend the time tomorrow. It brings me so much joy to share....

Here's 10 simple and beautiful ways to celebrate Winter Solstice

1. Light candles or a fire.

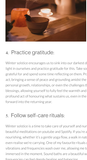
Create a warm and cosy atmosphere by lighting candles or a fire. This can be a beautiful way to honour the return of the light and the darkness of the winter solstice. The warmth and light of the fire can symbolise the return of the sun and the hope for the coming year. Gathering around a fire with loved ones can also be a special way to share traditions, stories and wishes for the year ahead. Many ancient cultures celebrated the winter solstice as a time to honour the sun and mark the shortest days of the year. Beyond its symbolism, lighting a fire or candles creates a calming, reflective space where you can pause, breathe, and connect with the stillness of the season. Whether you're alone or in quiet contemplation or share the moment with loved ones, this ritual invites a sense of peace and mindfulness, anchoring you in the magic of Winter Solstice.

2. Clear the space.

Using sage or palo santo, clear the space you're going to honour Winter Solstice in. Spending time in our daytime energy and tidying up is important. It is essential to do so before the Winter Solstice, ensure they are infinite only sound or consider alternatives that resonate with your own connection to the land. This act of cleansing can help to remove any negative energy and create a fresh, positive environment for the celebrations. It can also be a symbolic way to release the old and welcome in the new, as well as creating the returning light of the sun to illuminate the darkness.

3. Reflect on the past year.

Take some time to reflect on the year and all that has happened. This can be a great opportunity to let go of anything that no longer serves you and to set intentions for the coming year. Reflecting allows you to honour your journey, recognising how far you've come and the lessons learned along the way. Focus on acknowledging the moments that brought joy, growth, and connection, as well as the challenges that shaped you. Whether it's through journaling, meditation, or simply sitting in quiet contemplation, this practice can help you release what's no longer needed and welcome the new energy. As you reflect, consider journaling your thoughts, meditating on your experiences, or simply sitting in stillness to gain clarity. With this deeper awareness, you can begin to set intentions for the year ahead, aligning with what truly matters to you and stepping into the new year with confidence. This process is transformative, reflection into a sacred act of release and renewal, empowering you to step into the next chapter with purpose and intention.



4. Practice gratitude.

Winter solstice encourages us to look into our darkest depths. To see the shadows in ourselves, think about the light in ourselves and appreciate the life. Take some time to reflect on the things in your life that you are grateful for and spend some time reflecting on them. Practising gratitude at this time can be a transformative way to shift your perspective and cultivate a sense of appreciation for the blessings in your life. Whether you're journaling, expressing gratitude, or even free-drawing what you're thankful for, this practice can help you feel more grounded and connected. Allowing, allowing yourself to fully feel the warmth and connection this bring. Gratitude is a super-yet profound act of honouring what surprises us, even in the darkest times and it reminds us of the light we carry forward into the returning year.

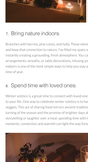
5. Follow self-care rituals.

Winter solstice is a time to take care of yourself and nurture your body, mind, and spirit. There are some beautiful manifestations or possible self-Saintly. If you're able to, move your body in a way that is comfortable and nourishing, such as yoga, dancing, or a walk in nature or simply stretching to release tension and relax. Eat warm nutritive and cozy. One of my go-to's for a winter solstice ritual is to spend time in a bath. The gentle warmth can help to relax your muscles and calm your mind, creating a peaceful space for reflection. Consider incorporating essential oils, herbs, or even flower petals into your bath for an added touch of luxury. Lighting candles around the bath can also create a soothing ambiance, helping you unwind and connect with the moment. Soaking in the bath is an act of self-care that allows you to honour the Solstice's invitation to pause, replenish your energy, and indulge with the rhythms of nature.

A GENTLE GUIDE & JOURNAL
Aligning with the Wheel of the Year
A GUIDE TO REVELLING OUR CONNECTION TO NATURE
FAIRY WHEEL BOOKS
READY SOON

6. Connect with nature.

Spend some time outside, even if it's just for a few minutes. Take in the beauty of the winter landscape and appreciate the natural world around you. In these darkest days, seeking sunlight in your face becomes even more important. A brief moment in the sun can lift your mood, boost your energy, and remind you of the light returning to the world. Whether it's a walk in the park, sitting in your garden, or simply standing by a window, soaking in sunlight can help you connect with nature and your body. Observing any wildlife or plants that remain, noticing the ground, the ground, and the sky around you, and how they change and alter. Whether it's standing under the sun, walking through the woods, or dipping into a city park, connecting with nature during the Winter Solstice invites us to align with the Earth's rhythms and honour our place in the cycle.

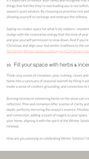


7. Bring nature indoors.

Bring nature with the darkness, literally. These elements can help to bring a sense of the outdoors inside and keep that connection to nature. I've filled my space with a lot of pine trees, the scent is totally sublime, instantly creating a grounding, fresh atmosphere. You can also use pine branches to create festive arrangements, wreaths, or table decorations, infusing your space with their timeless beauty. Bringing nature indoors during the Winter Solstice is a simple yet powerful way to honour the Earth's rhythms during this reflective time of year.

8. Spend time with loved ones.

Winter solstice is a great time to connect with loved ones and to celebrate the light and warmth that this bring to our life. One way to celebrate winter solstice is to have a feast, hearty winter stew with roasted meats and vegetables, or a cozy soup with crusty bread. Sharing a meal with loved ones can be a wonderful way to celebrate the turning of the wheel and the return of the light. It's also a great opportunity to catch up with friends and family, strengthening our bonds with those who matter most. Whether it's a cozy evening with candles, storytelling or laughter over a meal, spending time with loved ones reminds us that, even in the darkest moments, we're surrounded by love and connection.



9. Practice the art of saying no.

Winter Solstice invites us to slow down, rest, and reflect—a call that's more than it's often set aside with the demands of the outside world. For many, December is filled with obligations: parties, functions, Christmas concerts and carnivals and the pressure for endless shopping... you know the score! All of the expectation on us around these social obligations can leave us feeling drained and disconnected. Remember to honour what nature asks of us and what society demands can be overwhelming.

It's important to honour your needs and recognise that it's completely okay to say no. Stepping away from social events, even if it means missing out, can be a powerful act of self-care. It allows you to spend more time with the season's quiet energy, like choosing to prioritise rest and reflection, you honour the natural rhythms of nature, allowing yourself to recharge and embrace the stillness.

Saying no creates space for what truly matters—your connections, creativity, and promises—and helps you align with the season's purpose. Whether it's declining an invitation, setting boundaries with work, or simply choosing to unplug and give yourself permission to slow down. Read more in my blog post, Aligning with the Wheel of the Year, about Whether it's a cozy evening with candles, storytelling or laughter over a meal, spending time with loved ones reminds us that, even in the darkest moments, we're surrounded by love and connection.

Aligning with the Wheel of the Year
A Guide to Reveling our Connection to Nature
Pre-order now

10. Fill your space with herbs & incense.

Think cozy scents of cinnamon, pine, nutmeg, cloves and mistletoe, all bring to seasonal warmth. Transform your home into a cozy sanctuary of seasonal warmth by filling it with the cozy scents of herbs and incense. These aromas evoke a sense of comfort, grounding, and connection to the season's natural rhythms.

Burning incense or simmering herbs on the stove can create a calming atmosphere, inviting stillness and reflection. Scents like frankincense, myrrh, and sandalwood are traditionally used in winter rituals to uplift and clear the spirit, perfectly mirroring the season's essence. Whether you're hosting a gathering or enjoying a quiet moment of solitude, a fragrant home can spark conversation and connection, adding a touch of magick to your space. These small sensory rituals can elevate the energy of your home, aligning it with the spirit of the Winter Solstice and creating a welcoming environment for rest and renewal.

How are you planning on celebrating Winter Solstice? I'd love to hear your ideas and rituals in the comments.

Immerse yourself in more Winter Solstice magick
About me
Hey hey love, I'm Rebecca, a visual storyteller unleashing the power of photo and video to revelling our connection to nature.
By illuminating the liminal space where myth, magick and intuition meet, we gain confidence in ourself, enchantment and awe to empower the healing of people and planet.
My work as a photographer and wizzer storyteller has taken me from the wild coasts of Scotland to the wild edges of Iceland.
It was with immense gratitude and a sense of deserving that I received the accolade of Scottish Landscape Photographer of the Year 2024.
As Presidess of the Board of Trustees for Where Wise Women Walk, a charity dedicated to the Wise Women of our Past, we have shared the magick powerful rituals and purpose-driven narratives.
Together, let's embrace the wild edges where of people, place and planet reveal.
The wonder and hazard of freezing (fog, nature's try on)
How to install connection to the seasons
What are liminal spaces and why does it matter?
An alternative Christmas message: not to the season for the season
Reclaiming Winter Solstice: Letting go of Christmas chaos and reconnecting with ancient wisdom
20 Pagan traditions for Winter Solstice
The problem with Pathetic Christmas: Rekindling nature's wisdom for a meaningful mid-winter
Living In Seasonal Rhythms: Embracing Winter, Nightmares and Spring and Rejecting the 'New Year, New You' Mantra
Connecting with nature and cultivating gratitude: affirmations for the winter solstice
Solstice Blessings: On my love of light
50 simple and beautiful ways to celebrate Winter Solstice
Why I'm not celebrating Christmas anymore.
Add some wonder to your walls
FINE ART PRINTS THAT SPARK AWE AND FUEL CHANGE
Sustainable fine art prints order online, delivered direct to your door.
Visit Print Shop
Make Space
The Wheel of the Year

FILL YOUR WINTER NIGHTS WITH THE MAGICK
Chasing the aurora borealis
A BEGINNER'S GUIDE: HOW TO SEE AND PHOTOGRAPH AURORA BOREALIS
These are 7 years of tips and tricks to help you switch on the pulse and photograph the aurora borealis. Whether you're a beginner or a pro, these tips will help you to be confident in your abilities to capture stunning northern lights photographs.
Read more

← PREVIOUS
Why I'm not celebrating Christmas anymore.
NEXT →
Solstice Blessings: On my love of light

Similar Posts
Turning my back on Capitalism
Christmas Magic - Hope Wonder
December 27, 2020
How to see the Northern Lights from a plane. Spy for spotting the northern lights at 10,000 feet
By Gabrielle Authentic Lifestyle Lifestyle Photography
October 14, 2020
Love is More than Just Motivation
By Gabrielle Authentic Lifestyle Lifestyle Photography
October 14, 2020
Capturing the Northern Lights Iceland - Tips for photographing the aurora
By Gabrielle Authentic Lifestyle Lifestyle Photography
September 12, 2020

For all of the latest news and updates and to get a free guide by subscribing automatically to our once-monthly digest. right to the newsletter below.
Subscribe

We use cookies to ensure that we give you the best experience on our website. If you continue to use this site we will assume that you are happy with it. Yes No Read more