THIRD EGG

I was actually watching the live feed this morning when, at 1012, Augusta laid her third egg to complete her 2026 clutch (a fourth egg is technically possible but most unlikely). I haven't got a clear picture to show you yet but, on handover of incubating duties, it was noticeable that Samson had his normal difficulty in manoeuvring the eggs for the first time to get all 3 underneath him!

So now we settle down for the incubation period and we will be looking for, fingers crossed, hatching at the end of May. Let's hope we have a peaceful, drama-free month of May.
